

The Cross Arms Tavern and Inn

written by A J | February 23, 2015

The Cross Arms Tavern and Inn is the heart of the village, located just on the main square of Cresthaven. It is a cozy two-story timber and brick building, with several leaded glass windows that let the sunlight stream in. Inside, there is a warm fire burning in the fireplace and the scent of roasting meat wafts from the kitchen.

Innkeeper

The innkeeper is a kind and hospitable old female elf named Fleming. She greets every guest with a warm smile and a friendly welcome. Fleming takes great pride in ensuring that her guests are well taken care of, and she is always ready to offer a listening ear or a comforting word.

Fleming possesses a magical helmet, crafted by the illustrious elf armorer Kris Salanathas. The helmet has been passed down through her family for generations and is said to offer protection from all forms of magic. Fleming is happy to show it off to interested guests and tell the story of its creation.

The Cross Arms Tavern and Inn is the perfect place for a night of revelry and fun. The atmosphere is lively, the food is filling, and the company is good.

The tavern features live music from a talented group of musicians who play traditional folk music. The sound of the lute, flute, and drum fill the air, and patrons are encouraged to sing along and dance.

Dungeon Masters

Here are some instructions for a Dungeon Master to use the following NPCs and adventure ideas designed for the Inn:

1. Introduce the NPCs: Have the players encounter the NPCs naturally, such as at the inn, in the marketplace, or on the road. Describe their physical appearance, clothing, and demeanor to make them memorable.
2. Use the NPCs to drive the story: Each NPC has their own goals and motivations, which can be used to create interesting and engaging quests. Consider how the NPCs can help or hinder the players' progress towards their own goals.
3. Make the quests diverse: The quests should be varied in terms of difficulty, location, and type. For example, one quest may involve fighting monsters in a dangerous dungeon, while another may involve negotiating with a corrupt official in the city.
4. Incorporate the inn: Use the inn as a hub for the players to gather information, rest, and socialize. Describe the atmosphere of the inn and its patrons to make it feel like a living and breathing place.
5. Use sensory details: Incorporate sensory details to make the NPCs and quests more immersive. Use vivid descriptions of sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and textures to create a more vivid and memorable world.
6. Encourage player choice: Allow the players to choose which NPCs to work with and which quests to pursue. This will give them a sense of agency and make the game feel more dynamic.
7. Connect the quests: Consider ways to connect the quests together to create a larger story arc. For example, the artifact that Anzil seeks to destroy may be connected to the ruins that Rimi wants to explore.

By following these instructions, the Dungeon Master can create a rich and engaging world for the players to explore, with memorable NPCs and diverse quests that will keep them engaged and excited.
